B. Identifying and Prioritizing Focus Areas

Identify and prioritize the neighborhoods, schools, and other areas of the county that face the most significant public safety risk from juvenile crime.

According to the US Census Bureau, San Benito County's population as of July 1, 2019 was estimated at 62,808. Of this population, 60.8% are identified as Hispanic or Latino, 32.8% identify as Caucasian (White alone), 3.9% identify as Asian alone, 3.1% identify as American Indian and Alaska Native alone, and 1.6% identify as African American. Of the sixty-two (62) thousand people living in San Benito County, 25.5% are under the age of 18 and reflect our youth. Additionally, the median household income from (2015-2019) was $86,958.00 and the percentage of those in poverty within San Benito County was 10.4% of the population.

San Benito County is generally considered a small county; however, it has quickly become a bedroom community for the Bay Area, as high-income workers seek a lower cost of living and housing. San Benito County has multiple residential developments and with each year brings an influx of new people from the Silicon Valley, Bay area, and Central Coast. The focus areas in San Benito County that face the most significant public safety risk for juvenile crime are the west-side neighborhoods of Hollister, CA which is San Benito County's seat (largest town). The schools most significantly impacted are generally the alternative education school sites: San Andreas Continuation High School, Pinnacles Community School, and Santa Ana Opportunity School. The population of youth in these neighborhoods and schools are prioritized at the top with needing support and services in the community.

C. Juvenile Justice Action Strategy

Describe your county's juvenile justice action strategy. Include an explanation of your county's continuum of responses to juvenile crime and delinquency as well as a description of the approach used to ensure a collaborative and integrated approach for implementing a system of swift, certain, and graduated responses for at-risk youth and juvenile offenders.

That mechanism is a board comprised of local professionals from youth serving organizations who meet monthly to examine juvenile cases and when appropriate, provide creative restitution opportunities or other alternatives which assists youth to understand the impact of their offense. Part II. Juvenile Justice Crime Prevention Act (JJCPA)
(Government Code Section 30061(b)(4))

A. Information Sharing and Data Describe your information systems and their ability to facilitate the sharing of data across agencies within your county. Describe the data obtained through these systems and how those data are used to measure the success of juvenile justice programs and strategies.

San Benito County Probation attends multi-agency team meetings which are held between the various service providers twice a month at Children's System of Care (CSOC). The CSOC meetings are facilitated by San Benito County Behavioral Health and all at-risk youth that are discussed through CSOC have a consent for release of information form signed amongst all agencies working with that youth's case. CSOC meetings are consistently held the first and third Tuesday of every month for at least an hour in which various information is shared and discussed. This information includes, but is not limited to a youth's: family dynamics, educational history and goals, substance use history, past and present counseling services, juvenile programming, at-risk for placement discussions, barriers to employment, etc.

The probation department itself utilizes Corrections Software Solutions (CSS) as its case management system for sharing information and data on probation youth. In the last year we have developed policy and protocols for probation staff to reference when using the CSS case management system. We have worked collaboratively with our CSS partners to develop reports that are conducive to sharing information in collaborative meetings. Some of the data obtained reflects the following: number of youths served on probation, risk assessment levels of youth, programming and treatment needs for youth, and number of youth in foster care placement.

B. Juvenile Justice Coordinating Councils

Does your county have a fully constituted Juvenile Justice Council (JJCC) as prescribed by Welfare & Institutions Code 749.22?

C. Funded Programs, Strategies and/or System Enhancements

JJCPA Funded Program(s), Strategy and/or System Enhancement

Below are JJCPA funded programs reported by the county.

Program Name:

Intensive Supervision for Juveniles Program

Evidence Upon Which It is Based:

Youth referred to the Intensive Supervision for Juveniles Program are evaluated through a validated risk assessment, the Positive Achievement Change Tool (PACT) and target the moderate to high-risk youth in the community. This small percentage of chronic offenders' accounts for more than half of all juvenile arrests. These youth can easily be identified because they are usually age 15 or younger at the time of their first juvenile delinquency system referral. Data trends reflect that these youth scored an average of 4.98 on the Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs) assessment which indicates a higher likelihood of heart disease, lung cancer, diabetes and many autoimmune diseases, as well as depression, violence, being a victim of violence, and suicide. Further, our PACT assessment data reflects that these youth also experience the highest need for mental health treatment and reported higher rates of suicidal ideation. As such, probation officers assigned to oversee youth that fall under this program are responsible for providing service referrals geared to helping both the youth and their family. Probation Officers utilize evidence-based cognitive journals provided by the Change Company to assist youth in several areas noted above. Through intensive supervision, thorough case management, and a trauma-informed care approach, youth are referred to several other community-based programs, classes, and services.

Description:

This program is a family focused caseload that emphasizes matching the entire family to local resources. The family focused case planning is important given the parents' demonstrated inability to adequately supervise and discipline their children. This caseload accounts for youth that are of imminent risk for removal from their home and child family team (CFT) meetings are regularly held for this caseload. Probation officers are trained in Safety Organized Practices (SOP) and use this approach when conducting CFT's and developing goals for the youth's case plan. In addition, youth are immersed in valuable community-based programs and activities at a level that facilitates competency development.

Part III. Youthful Offender Block Grant (YOBG)
(Welfare & Institutions Code Section 1961(a))

A. Strategy for Non-707(b) Offenders

Describe your county's overall strategy for dealing with non-707(b) youthful offenders who are not eligible for commitment to the Division of Juvenile Justice. Explain how this Plan relates to or supports that strategy.

Non- 707(b) offending youth will remain under the jurisdiction of the San Benito County Juvenile Court and/or the San Benito County Probation Department. San Benito County Probation collaborates with community-based organizations and county partners to provide case management, individualized treatment, and referrals for service for the following: interactive journaling, group counseling, family counseling, parenting education, substance disorder treatment, mental health counseling, and other programs designed to address trauma, cultural appropriations, and any other identified needs or barriers to success. Youth newly entering the juvenile justice system will undergo a risk assessment to determine their risk level of recidivism and identify their needs and strengths. The criminogenic needs outlined in the assessment tool then help probation officers to develop goals and interventions in a case plan with the youth and their family. All youth are processed through our juvenile intake and youth rating a moderate to high-risk score will be investigated further to develop a case plan for treatment and services. These youth may be subjected to our Juvenile Review Board, Informal probation through 654 or 654.2 W&I, or their case may be referred to the district attorney's office for prosecution and possible wardship or deferred entry of judgment.

B. Regional Agreements

Describe any regional agreements or arrangements to be supported with YOBG funds.

None at this time.

YOBG Funded Program(s), Placement, Service, Strategy and/or System Enhancement

Below are YOBG funded programs reported by the county.

Evidence Upon Which It is Based:

The Juvenile Review Board provides a community-based diversionary program which promotes accountability for at risk-youth and presents an opportunity for positive development. JRB provides a community-based mechanism for diverting appropriate juvenile cases from the Juvenile Court system. That mechanism is a board comprised of local professionals from youth serving organizations who meet monthly to examine juvenile cases and when appropriate, provide creative restitution opportunities or other alternatives which assists youth to understand the impact of their offense. The JRB strives to make informed decisions on each case by taking into consideration each important area of the youth's life, including home, community, and school.

San Benito County Probation presently utilizes the Positive Achievement for Change Tool (PACT) and youth rating low to moderate on the PACT risk assessment may be referred to the Juvenile Review Board. JRB members meet with youth and engage in discussions with the minors and their families to address issues that resulted in their citation or arrest. They will respond to identified needs through referrals to services and utilize compliance incentives or accountability techniques that include giving back to the community (i.e. community service) and goal setting. After a youth successfully completes requirements imposed by JRB, their case is closed and their record is ordered sealed immediately, therefore their case is not held before the juvenile court and they are not further entrenched in the juvenile delinquency system. JRB has proven to be a successful diversion program and has reduced the number of youth that are adjudged Wards of the Court and/or placed on intensive supervision.

The program offers pro-social activities to provide at-risk youth with a structured, well-balanced, fitness regime in a safe and nurturing environment, while addressing the physical, intellectual, psychological, emotional, and social development of each youth. The program will consist of three classes per week that will take place on Tuesdays and Thursdays and a Saturday class. These will be private classes with private instruction geared toward the needs of the youth. While attending a CrossFit session, the youth will be offered a fitness program that changes each day and an educational piece on healthy eating and making smart life choices pertaining to their physical and mental health and well-being. There will be additional discussion on responsibility, accountability, ethics, and morals. Progress for each youth will be tracked physically and mentally with monthly updates to show their overall progress with measurable outcomes resulting from their hard work, dedication, and their individual choices to live healthier lifestyles. This youth intervention will provide stress relief, structure, teach commitment, and limit the time our youth spend on the street during peak crime hours without purpose or supervision. It will also help build self-confidence, self-esteem, a sense of self-worth, achievement, give them the opportunity to rely on themselves and their community for support, and be a positive influence in their own community.
